Board gives ICC $565 for copier

By HEATH MACALPINE
Guardian Staff Writer

The Student Activities Budget Board last night decided to try to give away the $2,110 that is left in its discretionary fund.

The move took place only a week after the board made some unpopular cuts in the budgets of several student organizations.

"IF THE MONEY is just going to go back to the University if we don't do something with it, I think that we should try and see if any of the student organizations are interested," said Board Member Mike Morris.

Chairer Nelda Martinez agreed with Morris' statement. "The money does no one any good just sitting there. I think that it could be put to better use than to just allow it to disappear," she said.

The board decided to notify Inter-Club Council members that it would be interested in hearing any possible budget requests from clubs. Final decision as to what with the money will be made at next Thursday's meeting.

AT THE SAME meeting, Budget Board funded $565 to ICC for a new ditto machine. The unanimous vote came after ICC Chairer Linda Henry explained her rationale for the request.

"The current machine has already broken down several times. Right now, it needs a part that will run $100 for the machine to be in the best possible shape. If we get a new machine, we won't have to bother with that. We'll just keep it as it is as an emergency backup."

The Budget Board also discussed recommendations that it might make to next year's board.

"I THINK THAT there should be something saying that the board ought to set up some sort of communications between the board and the various organizations it fund," suggested Board Member Chris Williamson. "That sort of thing would really clear up a lot of potential problems."

Morris agreed with this and other ideas that were presented, but said, "I don't think that we should mandate that next year's board be committed to anything we might say. They might be in a totally different situation with totally different ideas."

Martinez, speaking on another topic, criticized the Student Media Committee, which oversees The Daily Guardian, radio station WWSU, and the literary magazine Nexus.

ACCORDING TO Martinez, the committee didn't examine the budgets of those organizations closely enough before they came before Budget Board.

"I think that you need conscientious people on that committee (See 'BUDGET,' page 8)

New billboards advertise own uniqueness

By RON WUKESON
Guardian Staff Writer

The new billboard you may have noticed while entering the campus has nothing to advertise except its own uniqueness.

The sign which has featured little messages like "Another Billboard," and "Can I Share A Book," is a project for an advanced sculpture class and the creation of student Alvin Winslow.

"I'M GIVING people something to look at in the morning," said Winslow, who feels it is "a ritual of sorts" for people to expect to see billboards.

"The main concern is that this billboard is a different one, a separate one from the others."

Winslow said he "wouldn't be surprised" if the sign were vandalized, but added he has "a plan if it is (vandalized) that would be worked into the piece."

THE PUBLIC exhibition of the billboards, which are located at both the Col. Glenn and Kauffman Ave. entrances to the University, is part of a plan to make the art students' work "more visible," said Winslow. The outdoor display is an extension of the project last fall, where five art students placed large portraits of the art faculty in the woods across from the library.

"It's just to make things more visual," said Winslow, "to show we exist."

The billboards don't necessarily carry the same message at both locations each day, added Winslow. Today's sign at the Col. Glenn entrance reads

"Look! The Rock Is Gone," while the one at Kauffman Ave. says "I fibbed That The Big Rock Was Stolen."

ONE OF THE five students involved in the fall project, Wilda Gilbert, also has an advanced sculpture project on display outside.

Gilbert described her current project as a "fantasy garden," and is located on a grassy hill beside Millett Hall.

"It's reminiscent of a garden where everything doesn't bloom at once, yet where everything is unreal."

THE "FLOWERS" in the project are made of polyester batting painted brightly. According to Gilbert, the number of flowers is hard to determine because "some of them have been ripped off."

The piece was designed to be "sort of something to make people smile," Gilbert remarked. Her inspiration came because of the weather of the early spring.

"I wanted to do something to rebel against the gloomy weather we'd had."

Mr. Spock McKinley's closest contender

By MIKE HOSIER
Guardian Staff Writer

"As it turned out, my biggest opponent was Mr. Spock," said Vicky McKinley, newly elected student caucus representative for the school of science and engineering.

McKinley ran unopposed in the recent student caucus elections and received a total of 223 votes.

HER CLOSEST competitor for the position proved to be Mr. Spock. He garnered two write-in votes.

Commenting on the election, McKinley said "I campaigned verbally but did little more than that because I was running unopposed."

She did, however, go around and encourage people "to vote, not only for me, but just to vote."

"I think that if Student Caucus does enough to get students interested then they'll vote."

McKinley's previous experience with the student caucus has been as a past member of both the science and engineering curriculum committee and the University petitions committee.

"I HAVEN'T thoroughly been acquainted with it yet," she said of her new office. "From what I can gather, I serve on committees and get other students to also sit on committees."

While her knowledge of what her responsibilities consist of are limited, McKinley does have some definite plans.

"Probably the biggest thing we (student caucus) need right now is student input. I'd like us to be more available to the students next year."

ONE WAY caucus plans to go about accomplishing this is to utilize their office in Allyn Hall. By doing this they hope to make it "a two way street" by both providing information to students and be getting students' input."

In the past "student caucus hasn't really been all that visible," McKinley said. "I think we should start fresh on our own merits and not necessarily try to change what has already been done."

"I don't feel that we should commit ourselves to a lot of projects until we can be sure of what the students want."

"WE SHOULD spend more time on the academics. That's our main purpose for being here at school and everything else should be secondary."

One improvement that McKinley would like to see made is the conditions, the potholes, etc., out in C lot.

Shooting suspect found dead in cell

DAYTON (UPI) — A suspect in the shooting death of the president of a clothing company and wounding of the victim's father-in-law was found dead Thursday in his cell at the Montgomery County Jail.

Theodore Thompson, 47, Dayton had been transferred from the city jail to the county jail late Wednesday night for his own safety, authorities said.

HE WAS charged with aggravated murder, attempted aggravated murder and aggravated robbery.

Authorities said Thorapson was found hanging in his cell.

His common law wife, Frances

Jean Wright, 30, Dayton, was also charged with aggravated murder, attempted aggravated murder and aggravated robbery.

AUTHORITIES SAID Henry S. Reynolds, 42, president of Leisure City, Inc., a denim clothing company, was shot to death and his father-in-law, Floyd Smith, 54, wounded.

Both were made to lie face down on a bed and were shot in the head.

They were also robbed of their money and valuables.

Thompson was identified as a former civil service employment specialist.

Helicopter crash triggers investigation

MECHANICSBURG, Ohio (UPI) — A federal investigation started Thursday into the crash of a crop dusting helicopter which injured the pilot, Richard L. Hollister, Garden City, Kan.

Hollister, who was flying for Diversified Helicopter Service at Springfield, Ohio, was injured Wednesday night in the crash on the Edward Cauley farm three miles northeast of Mechanicsburg in Champaign County which demolished the copter.

CAULEY TOLD sheriff's deputies that Hollister tried to make a left turn in a low altitude pass over a field along Bean Road off Ohio 559. The rotor hit the ground, causing the chopper he owns to flip over and crash.

The pilot was taken to Urbana Mercy Memorial Hospital where he was reported in fair condition. The hospital did not disclose the extent of his injuries.

Ohio teachers responding to survey use own money

COLUMBUS (UPI) — The majority of Ohio teachers responding to a survey by the Ohio Education Association are spending an average of $50 a year of their own money on materials to use in classrooms.

The OEA said Thursday that the survey shows that 77 percent of the Ohio teachers responding are spending their own money on certain instructional materials.

THE OEA said the instructional materials being purchased are often basic teacher aids that teachers cannot obtain from the school district such as pens, construction paper, maps, chalk, safety aprons, workbooks and scissors.

Many of those responding to the poll said they have purchased the materials because the school district has insufficient funds allocated for classroom supplies, the OEA.

Ohioans vote by absentee ballot

COLUMBUS (UPI) — Secretary of State Ted W. Brown advised Thursday that Ohioans desiring to vote by absentee ballot in the June 6 primary election must apply for their ballot by noon on June 3.

Brown said applications may be made to county boards of election in person or by mail. If the application is made in person, the voter marks his ballot on the spot.

ON A mail application, Brown said, the voter must state his name and voting residence, the reason he will not be able to vote at the polls and his party choice or independent status.

Eligible for voting absentee are persons 62 or older; those having an accident, medical emergency, personal illness or physical disability; and those with religious observances on election day, or who will be absent from the county or in jail for a misdemeanor or awaiting trial on election day.

For unforeseen medical emergencies occurring within six days of the election, the deadline for requesting absentee ballots is 3 p.m. on election day. A person must be confined to a hospital in his own county to be eligible for this extension.

Ford says Congress 'encroached too far'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Gerald Ford said yesterday Congress "encroached much too far" on presidential authority to respond to foreign policy crises and now ought to back off.

Ford said he had fought to get presidential "flexibility" restored when he was in office and now believes "President Carter is feeling" that need now.

"I HAVE said emphatically, repeatedly that I believe Congress has encroached much too far on the prerogatives of the commander in chief to conduct foreign policy," Ford told a news conference.

"The president do Congress has encroached much too far on the prerogatives of the commander in chief to conduct foreign policy," Ford said, "we all know" why Congress limited the power of the White House to use military force abroad. But I hope Congress now will back off and let a president who was elected" have that authority back.

Ford mentioned his own inability to involve the United States in the Angolan civil war as an example of hobbling a president. He said had this country been able to help the Angolan faction opposing the forces supported by the Soviet Union and Cuba, the results might have been different in that African country.

CARTER HAS treated Ford like a long-lost friend on this latest visit. On Wednesday, Ford and his wife Betty were at the White House for the unveiling of their official portraits.

Carter, presiding at the brief ceremony, called his predecessor, "one of my good friends, advisers and counselors in crisis." Ford replied he was grateful for the "many kindnesses" the Carters had shown him.

Huff has no doubts in mind

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga (UPI) — Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt was "stalked by more than one gunman" and his shooting may have been the work of organized crime, Gwinnett County District Attorney Bryant Huff said Thursday.

Huff, who interviewed Flynt in Columbus, Ohio, Tuesday, called a news conference to discuss possible motives in the sniper attack that left Flynt paralyzed at mid-thigh. He was shot March 6 in Lawrenceville where he was standing trial on obscenity charges.

"THERE IS no doubt in our minds that he was stalked by more than one gunman," said Huff.

"I say to whoever did this: Enjoy yourself while you can, because we're going to be knocking at your door," said Huff.

HE SAID Flynt was "very impressed" with police progress in the case and that he is now willing to consider various theories besides his own oft-stated belief that the FBI and CIA were behind his shooting because of a reopening of the John F. Kennedy assassination investigation proposed by Flynt's Los Angeles Free Press.

Beverly Hills leaves mixed legacy

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — One year after the Beverly Hills Supper Club fire which killed 165 persons a mixed legacy remains of once-heightened fire safety awareness and declining public interest in such measures.

Several officials familiar with Kentucky fire safety laws and fire prevention efforts said Thursday that the northern Kentucky fire last Memorial Day week had sharply raised the public awareness of the need for fire safety.

BUT THAT sentiment died out as quickly as the public interest in the fire faded, according to Louisville Fire Maj. Harold Embury, the assistant director of Kentucky's largest fire prevention bureau.

State Sen. David Harom, D-Louisville, said the public interest in the Beverly Hills fire helped create interest in a measure he sponsored to require fire detectors in all homes in Kentucky — but not enough interest for it to pass.

Humanity Resources Center provides media

By JANIE CARROLL
Guardian Staff Writer

Wright State University has a new satellite program in Downtown Dayton, the Humanity Resources Center, located in the Eugene R. Kettering Building, 104 East Monument.

Dr. James Walker, director of the Center for Public Policy Research at WSU, is the founder of the Resource Center. Walker drew up a proposal listing needs, costs, and ambitions of the projected center.

The Proposal was submitted to the Ohio Program in the Humanities. Out of forty proposals submitted to OPH, Walker's proposal was granted.

Walker's proposal was to establish a center which would house all the products resulting from grants awarded by the OPH. An individual or group granted money for projected projects, would duplicate their end product, giving one to the Center.

The Center would accumulate various media products such as videotapes, slide projections, and reel-to-reel products.

The Center was established in April, 1978, and Joanne Wallace was appointed Center director.

According to Wallace, the Center's main objective is to provide, but to civic groups such as YWCA.

"There are so many adults who might be considering going back to college, but they are a little cowed at the idea of a college classroom," Wallace said. "It is our plan to get educational materials to places they are familiar with."

The Center provides media equipment dealing with such issues as poverty, hunger, women's suffrage, and war. Since the Center is relatively new, Wallace is busy sending out brochures and catalogues listing the materials available to the public.

"Since we work on a cost recovery outfit, we do not make money," Wallace said. "We may change postage and handling fees for mail delivery, but if someone picks up material by hand, there is relatively little charge."

The Center currently houses between 600 and 800 pieces of media equipment. Pieces include 200 audio cassettes, 200 video cassettes, and 50 to 100 reel-to-reel presentations.

The Center will also be installing a 24-hour answering service and expanding their supply of media equipment.

Working with Wallace are Anne Furrey, secretary, and WSU Cooperative Education student, Aimsley Freech.

Wallace is excited about the Center, especially since it will help bring better education to the citizens of Dayton and surrounding areas.

"If people can understand where ideas and ethics come from, both historically and philosophically, they can have a better understanding of what life is all about. This is our main goal here at the Center."

'Horizons' kicks off aid to college women

By MIRIAM LIEGH ELROD
Guardian Staff Writer

Expanded Horizons, an orientation group for women coming to college for the first time or after a period of absence, got off to an official start Tuesday, with the formation of an association.

Admissions advisor, George Hummel, designed and initiated the program with the help of Elenore Koch, vice-president and vice-provost for academic support programs.

HUMMEL EXPLAINED, "I talked to women who had anxieties about going to school. Some of them said they got to the door (of the school) and turned around and went home because they were intimidated by the campus."

The women who enrolled in the program began this quarter, take three classes on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. The classes consist of English 111, Communications 141, and a choice between Career Planning for Women or Anxiety, Assertiveness, and Role Transition.

Hummel said the program will be expanded fall quarter to acomodate 250 women. They will be divided into ten groups of 25 a piece and each group will attend classes together.

A LUNCHEON, held Wednesday in the Newman Center initiated the Expanded Horizons Association, a membership group for the women. It was hosted by the New Dawn, one of the three groups from the Communications 141.

Approximately 30 people attended the celebration where they were presented with charter membership cards to the association.

Pricilla Chadwick, member of Expanded Horizons, feels the program is "unique" and "necessary."

campus for the women coming back to school. It is more of a social function for the women to lend support to each other."

ANOTHER MEMBER, Pat Hoke said she appreciated the fact that the courses are not watered down, like similar programs at other universities.

Hummel agreed, "We didn't want to cut academic standards because we didn't want to give the women a soft first quarter and have them get slaughtered in regular classes next quarter." (See 'EXPANDED,' page 5)

Rip-offs increasing

The fact that campus rip-offs are increasing at an alarming rate seems only too consistent with today's world of inconsiderate, greedy, materialistic-minded persons.

Yet theft on campus is no minor mishap, and every day students fall prey to thieves, often realizing devastating losses.

Most of Wright State's students are not wealthy. If they were, they may not have enrolled at a state institution. The things they have are many times the only ones of value for them. Once they are taken away from them, the victim is left in a void.

Where have the days of mutual trust and integrity gone? It seems they have been pushed by the wayside in order to allow a more corrupt being to emerge.

And this is even more tragic when it happens at an institution dedicated to higher learning.

Such behavior only shows ignorance and a severe lack of respect. Even though thefts may have been committed by someone who needed the money he could derive from an object, the owner more than likely also made good use of it.

Wright State's security force is doing what seems to be expected of them, but they can only take action if a culprit has been caught. Therefore, it is up to us to protect our own property. As long as thieves go unchecked, valuables will be up for grabs.

And to the thieves, a message from us: This is not high school. We are supposedly adults living in a civilized world of study, searching together for our own personal goals. It's time you realized this and grew up.

See ya' Wednesday

Today's issue of The Daily Guardian is the last until next Wednesday, May 31 as Monday is Memorial Day.

We hope you enjoy the long weekend as you take the ninth week stretch before the last week of the school year, followed by final examinations.

As we partake of the weekend respite, we would do well to remember the real meaning of the Memorial Day holiday. The original intent of the day was to commemorate dead veterans who served our country in times of conflict.

Even though we at times disagree with the stance the nation's leaders take, we have to admire the efforts of those who showed their support by giving their lives in order to help perpetuate the country or its allies.

Guardian needs room

By DAVID MIX
Guardian Staff Writer

In the interest of the improvement of higher education, I have given advice on how to make better lectures and tests. Now I would like to make suggestions on how to improve the campus by moving certain organizations and departments to different places on the campus to better satisfy the needs of the students.

The first proposed change deals with The Daily Guardian. Most of you may know the Guardian office is about the size of an elevator and a phone booth combined. Now since the Guardian is a student newspaper, and the students do need to be served, the reporters and other staff members need more room and more air to breathe in order to write clear and precise (coherent) stories. This means the Guardian should have to be moved to a larger area. The library, the main baseball diamond, the tennis courts, and K-lot were all possibilities as well as the Executive Wing.

NOT BEING THE greedy type, I settled on the space where the bookstore is now. Just think, all the editors could have offices of their own. Each reporter would have a desk, an electric typewriter, and a telephone. Five new typesetting machines, two new headlines machines, and a new and wider layout table are only a few of the accessories that the Guardian could use. Anything to serve the students.

Some of you may ask, "What about the bookstore?" I have decided the bookstore also needs more room. So I have proposed to put it in the main gym of the Physical Education building.

"Where will the basketball team play the big home games?"

The answer is obvious! In the main gym of the P.E. building, of course. By putting the bookstore in the main gym, the basketball games will be even more challenging. In fact, the bookstore being in the main gym might even help the team rather than hinder it.

A book rack could well serve as a good screen, and pushing off the cash register for a layup would be beneficial (it will cost you though). What will be done with the vacated Guardian offices?

In compliance with the plea for more lounge area, I propose that the Registrars office and Bursar's office be moved to that spot. Of course the room will be cramped but with several oxygen tanks, I am sure they will survive.

After this move, the first floor of Allyn Hall will be entirely lounge area with the exception of the Executive Wing. Fear not, for I have also thought of a place for that area.

I PROPOSE THAT the administrative staff be moved to the University Center and share their offices with the Rathskellar. This way, the administrative staff will be where the students are.

Since the staff will be at the Rathskellar, I think it should be named after (and in the honor of) the university president. The eating establishment, in the basement of the University Center, will be known as the Keg.

In honor of the vice-president provost, next year's Wright State Catalog will be known as the Spiegel catalog.

ON THE CONTROVERSIAL topic of parking, I have another proposal. Since the parking lots cannot be expanded without cutting trees, and a parking garage is not in the foreseeable future, I think more parking would be available under the present parking lots. By parking underground, the students and faculty can take the tunnels from the lots to the buildings.

To carry things one step further, and to make things easier for everyone, I say a subway system should be made to carry people from the University Center to Fawcett, Millett, Allyn, and Oelmann Halls. These subways could also take people out to the parking lots.

The system would be handy by being able to take several hundred people out to the grassy knoll where October Daze and May Daze are held.

With underground parking and a subway system to bring the students in and back, both students and faculty as well as others will be pleased.

I HAVE ONE last recommendation concerning the deans of the various colleges on campus.

The title dean is an old, worn out title and the name should be changed. How about the frank of the College of Business and Administration, or the robert of the College of Science and Engineering, or the david of the College of Liberal Arts?

We must be careful not to be discriminatory. Women, who happen to be the "dean" of a college, could be the denise of the College of Nursing, the sally of the College of Education, or the betty of Graduate Studies.

Remember these changes are made not only to best serve the students, but the faculty as well. Considering the responses I have received concerning my ideas (none) I think the changes will go over well. Everyone will benefit from them.

WSU should take heads of sand on new logo issue

By MIKE HOSIFER
Guardian Staff Writer

It was revealed in a recent issue of the Daily Guardian that Wright State's logo, the Bearclaw, is being replaced by a more staid, and more traditional, logo in which the name of this most esteemed university is to be spelled out in a nice, unassumingly way.

The powers that be, in their omnipotence, have decided that, for the sake of the University's image, the Bearclaw is to be forever banished from the magic kingdom.

IN ITS PLACE they've encouraged a dull bit of nothing to come into a position of power.

The administrators, who have taken it upon themselves to devote time and effort to this undertaking have, however, taken a step in the wrong direction.

You see, the real problem with Bearclaw was that he lacked personality. This of course was due to the fact that he was only part of an animal instead of the whole beastie.

HOW CAN ANYONE grow to feel any degree of fondness for a piece of dead bear, or for that matter, any other pieces that should happen to come along?

I suggest—and I do this in all sincerity—that Wright State's logo be altered once again and that this time it take the form of an ostrich.

I can see it now...
THE SYMBOLISM!
Ostriches lay eggs, right? And universities have been known to nurse more than a few eggheads, right?

Get it? Eggs and eggheads?

THERE ARE feathers to represent the fact that Wright State just loves to tickle a person's intellectual fancy and, unless I'm mistaken, ostriches are black and white in color which is symbolic of the printed word!

Then there's the well known running ability of the ostrich. If we're really lucky, maybe the athletic department will see fit to change the name of the Raiders to the Birdies!

THE REAL REASON, though, that an ostrich would be just the right thing to be Wright State's logo is that ostriches possess a habit of continually sticking their heads in the ground.

After the overwhelming lack of voter turnout by students for the recent student caucus election, what better way to describe student apathy here on campus than an ostrich trying to bury itself head first?

Dr. Beverly Gaw, who teaches Communications 141, was pleased with the class and the creation of the association.

"I've found them to be the most enthusiastic students I've ever had. They have exhibited a tremendous openness to learning. I am looking forward to continuing the program in the fall."

After the lunch, the newly formed association went to the front of Hamilton hall where the Blue Horizons, a Communications 141 group, dedicated a flowering crabapple tree as a memorial to the first charter members.

The third Communications 141 group, Progressive, registered high school students to vote, earlier in May, as their class project.

'Shenanigans' cost volleyballers trip to China

DAYTON, Ohio — The United States Men's Volleyball team announced Thursday it had cancelled a trip to China because of "political shenanigans" on the part of the Chinese.

Men's Coach Doug Beal said the U.S. Women's team was also scheduled to go to China but the Chinese refused Arie Selinger, a graduate student at the University of Illinois and the coach of the women's team, entry because he was traveling under an Israeli passport.

Selinger is a native of Israel. "WHAT BEGAN AS A FRIENDLY playing tour of China at their invitation has become a political hassle," the association said in a statement.

"The United States Men's Volleyball team, headquartered in Dayton and the United States Women's Volleyball team, headquartered in Colorado Springs, were invited to play the National Chinese Volleyball team and some Chinese club teams in a tour of China from June 3 to June 19."

The association said the invitation was accepted in good faith and everything looked fine until about a month ago when "Chinese politics began to muddle the situation."

THE ASSOCIATION SAID THE Chinese then said Selinger would not be allowed entry into China because he was travelling under an Israel passport.

"We objected to his position by the Chinese and have been in negotiations since the time they put this roadblock in our way," said the association. "We feel that for the Women's team to make the tour without their coach would be a real handicap as well as a slap in the face."

"The Chinese now say that the coach could come if he gets a United States re-entry visa," said the association. "As a matter of principle, we cannot accept these political shenanigans."

"WE HAVE TRAVELLED AND PLAYED IN many countries, including Russia, and had not had as much trouble as we are having now with China."

"Because of the delay caused by this hassling, we have had to make other commitments. For these reasons, we of the United States Men's Volleyball team have decided to call-off the China tour," said the association.

Fielding miscues costly in Raider's NCAA losses

By JEFF KEENER
Guardian Sports Writer

"I felt we had the pitching staff to take us through the tourney, but our fielding let us down," said head baseball coach Ron Nischwitz, assessing the Raiders performance in the Great Lakes Regional tournament held in Macomb, Illinois last week.

During the tourney, WSU was plagued by errors in the field. In the opener against Western Illinois, the Raiders committed five errors, three in the seventh allowing the Leathernecks to score without any hits.

WRIGHT STATE made its fourth consecutive NCAA tournament appearance under the direction of former major league pitcher Ron Nischwitz and finished the season with a 17-16-2 season. Nischwitz and company have put together what is now the longest streak of consecutive appearances in the regional of any of the Great Lakes Regional teams (4 in a row).

Through the tournament Three raiders stood out above the rest of the athlete's in the NCAA action. Rowland in center, Kent Stuck in the infield and Gary Gabringer in the mound. Robingsen came close to being on the all-tournament team but was edged out by the catcher from Western (Bob Waropay) when the WSU catcher got the hot bat the final day.

The hot bat in the tournament refers to WSU's Kevin Newnam. Newnam raised his average from .321 to .344 to take the lead over his outfield counterpart (Rowland) who ended the season at .336.

CENTERFIELDER Barry

Rowland received top billing for the Raiders, as the Springfield native was the only repeater on the all-district first team. This all-district selection maintains Rowland's chances of being the first WSU athlete to be named to both the academic and perform-nation on the academic all-American team in 1977.

Senior Gary Gabringer and junior Kevin Newnam were selected by the coaches to the district's third team. Sophomore catcher Denny Robinson also was selected to the third team. Gabringer and Newnam were first team selections in 1977.

Pitching was the biggest improvement on this year's team with reliever Jeff Jacobs (Vandalia, Butler) capturing the earned run average honors at 1.96. Gabringer finished with a 5-5 record, but lowered ERA this year to 2.30. Junior Bob Pollard was second among the starters with an ERA of 2.98 and a 1-4 record while senior Rick Burger sported a 4.03 ERA and 5-2 record.

Time running out for WSU Golf team

By JEFF KEENER
Guardian Sports Writer

Time is running out if the Wright State golf team is to live up to head Coach Chuck Lischer's expectation of finishing among the top schools in the nation.

The Raiders, after two complete rounds, have fallen 33 strokes off the pace as WSU is holding tightly to 16th place. The good news for the Raiders is Tim O'Neal, who followed his opening round of 71 with a 74 to stay within striking distance of the leader. John McComish from California State at Northridge leads the competition with 139 strokes; O'Neal has used 145 and is tied for 11th.

Troy State leads the field with a 586 total, while the opening round leader Arkansas University at Little Rock fell eight places, and now stands at 597. WSU is in 16th tied with Southern Illinois at Edwardsville with a two round total of 619 strokes.

Scores for the Raider participants are as follows: Jeff Neff (78-79-157), Dave Penrod (80-79-159), Steve Hannaford (79-83-162) and Dave Novotny, who rebounded after opening round trouble posted rounds of (85-79-165).

Schull takes two Raiders to NCAA

Cross Country and Track coach Bob Schull takes two of his distant runners to Macomb, Illinois this weekend for the NCAA Division II National Track Championships.

Both senior Bob Shull and Sophomore Gary Loe qualified for the 1500 meter and their times this season place them in top positions in relation to the times recorded in last year's championships. Loe finished third in the nation in the event last year and became the first WSU track all-American.

tee. This year I think that a lot of people were just looking at budgets and rubber stamping them," she said.

Martinez suggested the Media Committee send their rationale along with their recommendations in the future. "That way we can see what they were thinking of," she said.

The final scheduled meeting of Budget Board will be held next Thursday. Student Caucus is expected to appoint next year's Budget Board members sometime this summer or early next fall, to replace the current board members whose terms expire on June 30.
